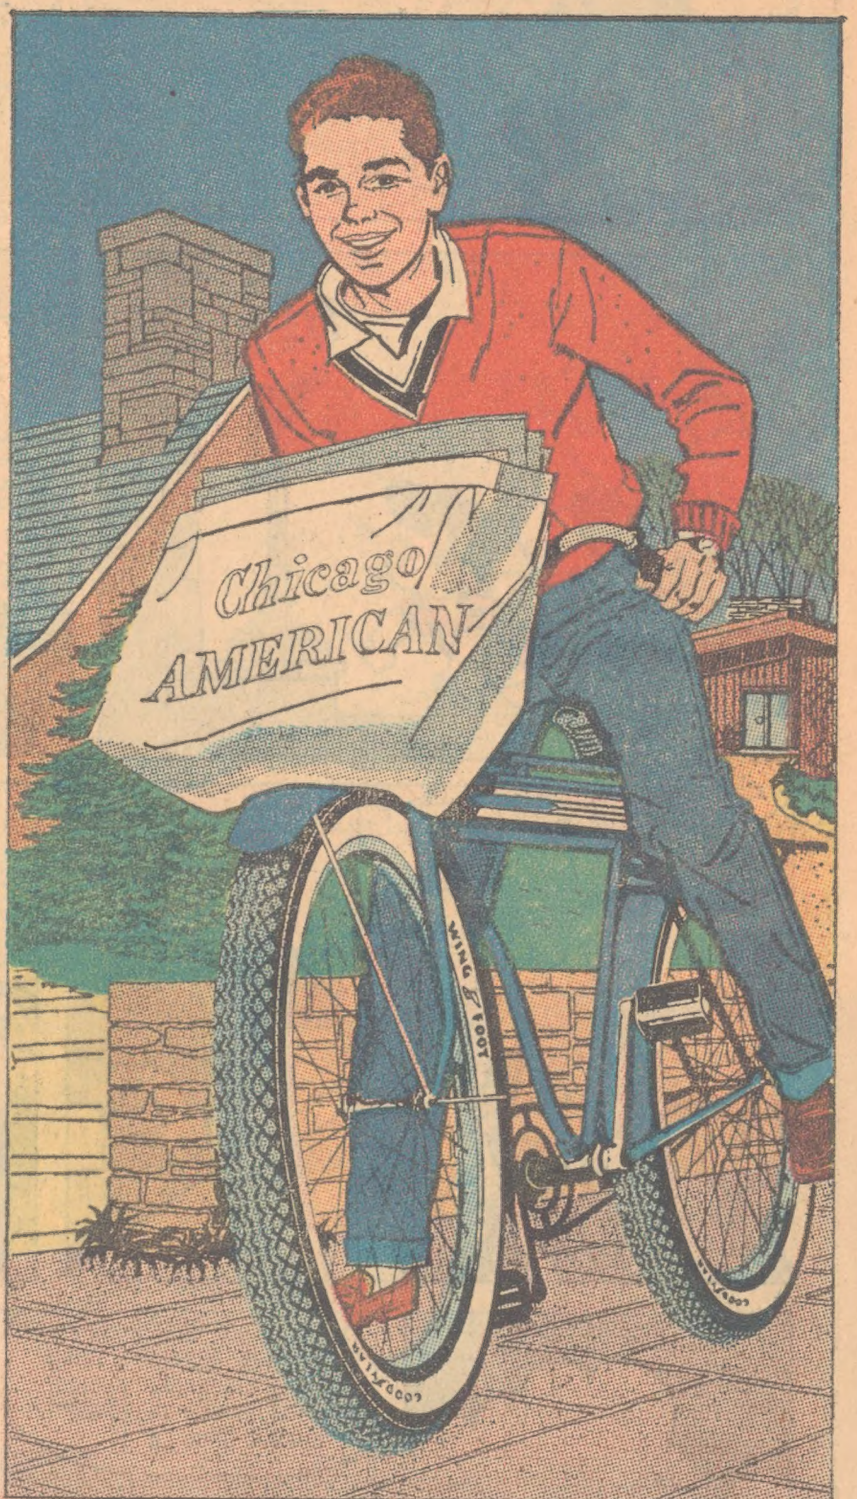
When your job depends on your bike

IT'S GOOD TO BE RIDING ON GOODYEARS

Meet Samuel Peter Ingardia of the Chicago American. Samuel has one of this newspaper's busiest delivery routes, uses his earnings to pay all his school expenses. His school: St. Mel High. Samuel likes handball, bowling and, of course, bicycling. He's been riding his route for more than two years on the same sturdy Goodyear tires.



THE WINGFOOT "175" — This Goodyear toughie is made especially for middleweight bikes. It rides smoothly, pedals easily, and it's made to wear an extra long time.

WHEN you handle a tough paper route day after day, you've just got to have tires you can count on.

So on Samuel Ingardia's bike you'll find a pair of tough, bruise-resistant Goodyear tires.

Goodyears are at their best when the going's worst. They're built with specially compounded rubber that will take plenty of punishment. And their treads are made to grip and hold — on pavements, dirt roads, even in snow and slush.

Whether you use your bike for work, for fun, or just to get you from here to there—you'll be a lot surer on Goodyear tires! Your neighborhood bike dealer will help you pick the type best suited to your bike. Goodyear, Cycle Tire Dept., Akron 16, Ohio.

COFFEE CAPERS

"Here's your milk, son," Mrs. Lane said cheerfully, setting the glass on the table. "And here's your coffee, dear," she told her husband, handing him the cup.

The rich, fragrant steam of the coffee rose from the cup and wafted delicately across Tommy's nose. How he loved the smell of coffee! And how he hated the taste of milk! "I won't drink it!" he said rebelliously, pushing the glass of milk away from his plate. "I want coffee!"

"Coffee!" repeated his father in astonishment. "Don't you think you're a little young for that, son?"

"No, I don't!" Tommy insisted. "I want coffee! I hate milk!"

"That will do, young man!" his mother reproved him. "You won't be at the coffee age for a good many years yet! Now drink your milk like a good boy and stop being silly."

Tommy said no more . . . and he drank the milk . . . but inwardly he was fuming. And an hour later, when dinner was all over and his mother and father were in the living room watching television, he slipped quietly into the kitchen and headed straight for the coffee pot that was simmering on the stove! Quickly and quietly, he poured himself a whole glassful of the hot, dark liquid and drank it all down in one great gulp! It burned his throat, and it tasted much more bitter than he'd expected, but still he was glad he drank it. He'd show his folks he could too be a coffee drinker!

That satisfying sense of secret mischief stayed with him all evening. Even when his mother bundled him off to bed, he was feeling too good to put up his usual argument. It was only after he was alone, with the lights turned out, that his good spirits vanished. Because, unaccountably, he wasn't a bit sleepy . . . and yet his body was very tired after the day's activities. He recalled hearing somewhere that coffee often kept people awake at nights, and that made him feel just a little bit guilty.

Then, suddenly, a huge, shapeless thing loomed out of the darkness of his room. It lifted him up bodily from the bed and carried him out the window, out into the night air, out somewhere into space! Then, before Tommy could catch his breath or cry out, the thing put him down . . . on his feet . . . terrified but unhurt! Wildly, Tommy looked around him. He seemed to be in some kind of an orchard. Yes, it was an orchard . . . a coffee orchard! He could smell the fragrance! And now the coffee beans were falling . . . raining down on him from every side . . . pelting him like hail stones . . . harder and harder. "Help!" Tommy screamed, throwing up his hands to ward off the blows. "Help!"

The sound of his own voice shocked him into awareness. And with a sudden start, he realized he was safe in his own bed at home! Why, it had all been a dream! "I swear," Tommy promised devoutly, "that I'm going to stick to milk for a long time to come! It's safer!"

DIPSY POODLE

"I'm hungry!" shouted Frenchie Poodle. "I'm hungry—and you never give me enough to eat!"

He looked up at his mother with the most appealing brown eyes a French Poodle could have. And Mrs. Poodle returned his glance, and said, "How much can one dog eat?! You've had enough for lunch!"

"Shucks!" Frenchie Poodle muttered to himself. "Lucky I'm not a Police Dog or else I'd starve!"

"Now, you go out and play," Mrs. Poodle told her son with a smile. "I'm sure you'll be home in time for supper!"

Frenchie went dashing down the road, not knowing exectly where he was going, but with one thought still burning in his mind. "Food, meat," he said to his stomach, "I'm still hungry!"

The dog walked for awhile, and then suddenly he saw a sign. "To the Zoo," the wooden marker said, and an arrow pointed straight ahead.

"Hey!" laughed Frenchie. "What an idea! They should be feeding the animals now, and if I could sneak myself into a cage, I could eat a day's full!"

His eyes lit up now, with a brilliant glow of promise. "Boy," he said, "when they dish out the meat to those animals, they sure dish out the meat!"

His mind was reeling with thoughts of huge chunks of meat. Red meat! Juicy meat! Luscious meat!

"Oh, let me at that zoo!" he shouted, and he was off.

But getting into a cage was going to be the hard part. And Frenchie Poodle soon found that out. He stood before the lion's cage for ten minutes, and no one bothered him. But when he tried to get just his paw in, he almost lost his head! A guard promptly threw him out on his ear!

Frenchie found the same results at the seal pond, the tiger's cage, and even in the monkey house.

But Frenchie was a pretty smart Poodle, and seeing he couldn't get in through the front of the cage, he tried the back.

Slowly, cautiously, slyly he worked his way in and hid himself in a corner. He couldn't see what animal lived there, but his mind suggested gorilla, rhino, elephant! "I'll even settle for a leopard!" Frenchie decided.

Then he heard the voice. "OK, boys," it said. "Here's your lunch!"

BANG! The food fell into the cage.

"Wasn't much of a bang," thought Frenchie, "but any meat will meet with my approval!" Frenchie figured he'd have to settle on a monkey's lunch, as he turned his head into the front portion of the cage and saw . . .

"Carrots! A rabbit's cage!" he screamed disgustedly. "And if there's anything I hate, it's carrots!"

There was only one thing for Frenchie Poodle to do. That was to climb out of the cage and patiently wait for . . . supper! And that's just what he did.
